GARDEN ROOM WINDOWS

Windows are an essential part of any garden room, providing natural light, ventilation, and a connection to the outdoors. When selecting windows for a garden room, there are a number of factors to consider, including the size, shape, material, and opening type of the windows.

The size of the windows will affect the amount of natural light that enters the garden room. Larger windows will allow more light in, while smaller windows will provide more privacy. The shape of the windows can also add visual interest to the garden room's design.

The material of the windows will affect their durability, insulation, and maintenance requirements. uPVC windows are a popular choice for garden rooms due to their durability and low maintenance. Aluminum windows are also a good option, as they are lightweight and resistant to rust and corrosion.

If you just wish to draw in more light into your garden room then a fixed window is a good choice. Using a fixed window provides a more minimal aesthetic, with less frame on show due to the lack of an opening element. Fixed windows can be easily built to a wide range of different shapes and sizes, giving you lots of design options to consider on your garden room.
